Chapter Outline

CHAPTER 12: CARDIOVASCULAR SYSTEM

12.1 The Blood Vessels

The cardiovascular system has three types of blood vessels: the arteries and arterioles (carry blood away from the heart to the capillaries), the capillaries (permit exchange of material with the tissues), and the veins and venules (return blood from the capillaries to the heart).

The Arteries

An arterial wall has three layers including endothelium, a layer of smooth muscle that can contract to regulate blood flow and blood pressure and fibrous and loose connective tissue. Smaller arteries branch into a number of arterioles which affect blood pressure.

The Capillaries

Capillaries join arterioles to venules. They are extremely narrow and have thin walls. The exchange of substances takes place in the capillaries.

The Veins

Veins and venules take blood from the capillary beds to the heart. Veins often have valves that prevent blood from flowing backward when closed. 70 % of the blood is in the veins.

12.2 The Human Heart

The heart is a cone-shaped, muscular organ about the size of a fist. The major portion of the heart, called the myocardium, consists largely of cardiac muscle tissue. The heart lies within the pericardium. Internally, the heart has four chambers: two thin-walled atria, and two thick-walled ventricles and the septum, a wall that separates the heart into the left and right side. The heart also has 4 valves: the atrioventricular valves(tricuspid and bicuspid) which are supported by chordae tendineae and the semilunar valves (the pulmonary and the aortic).

Path of Blood through the Heart

There is a specific pathway whereby blood flows through the heart such that oxygen-poor blood never mixes with oxygen-rich blood. The right side of the heart sends blood to the lungs and the left side pumps blood throughout the body. The pumping of the heart sends blood out to the rest of the body under pressure.

The Heartbeat

When the heart beats, first the two atria contract at the same time; then the two ventricles contract at the same time. Then all the chambers relax. The word systole refers to contraction of heart muscle, and the word diastole refers to relaxation of heart muscle. Pulse is the alternating expansion and recoil of an arterial wall.

Intrinsic Control of Heartbeat

The rhythmic contraction of the atria and ventricles is due to the intrinsic conduction system of the heart. Nodal tissue, which has both muscular and nervous characteristics, is located in two regions of the heart. The SA node (pacemaker) is in the upper wall of the right atrium and the AV in the base of the right atrium. (atrioventricular bundle and Purkinje fibres)

Extrinsic Control of Heartbeat
