John Henry Newman and the Development of Doctrine Stephen Morgan, 2021-11-26 John Henry Newman and the Development of Doctrine provides an analysis of the attempts by John Henry Newman to account for the historical reality of doctrinal change within Christianity in the light of his lasting conviction that the idea of Christianity is fixed by reference to the dogmatic content of the deposit of faith. It argues that Newman proposed a series of hypotheses to account for the apparent contradiction between change and continuity that this series begins much earlier than is generally recognized and that the final hypothesis he was to propose contained in An Essay on the Development of Christian Doctrine provides a methodology of lasting theological value and contemporary relevance. Stephen Morgan establishes the centrality of the problem of change and continuity in theology to Newman's theological work as an Anglican, its part in his conversion to Catholicism, and its contemporary relevance to Catholic theology. It also surveys the major secondary literature relating to the question with particular reference to those works published within the last fifty years. Additionally, Morgan considers the legacy of the Essay as a tool in Newman's theology and in the work of later theologians, finally suggesting that it may offer a useful methodological contribution to the contemporary Catholic debate about hermeneutical approaches to the Second Vatican Council and post-conciliar developments in doctrine.

Neuroactive metabolites of ethanol: a behavioral and neurochemical synopsis Merce Correa, John D Salamone, Elio Acquas, 2015-02-11 Ethanol is a very elusive drug which has mechanisms of action that are diverse and relatively non selective Moreover ethanol has been demonstrated to be a biologically active substance by itself but also a pro drug of the neuroactive metabolites acetaldehyde and acetate Acetaldehyde has traditionally been known as a toxic substance with several effects on multiple systems However in the last few decades evidence has accumulated to reveal the specific and in some instances distinct neural actions of acetaldehyde and acetate that are in part responsible for some of the observed psychoactive effects of ethanol The present issue will address these challenges to provide an up to date synopsis of the behavioral and neurophysiological impact of the two direct metabolites of ethanol acetaldehyde and acetate In doing so this issue will present human and rodent evidence on their behavioral and neurophysiological impact either when administered alone as drugs or when metabolically derived from their parent compound Emphasis will be placed to stress the importance of the different enzymatic systems that intervene to produce these metabolites either peripherally and or directly in the brain Similarly this Research Topic will be aimed at addressing some of the possible mechanisms of action of acetaldehyde and acetate in different brain areas and in different intracellular systems Furthermore the issue will lay out some of the suggested mechanisms of action of ethanol and of its metabolites by which they form adducts with other molecules and neurotransmitters such as dopamine and opioids which lead to salsolinol and tetrahydropapaveroline respectively and their impact on the synthesis and actions of neuromodulators such as adenosine and the cannabinoid system
