Comparative Climate Change Litigation: Beyond the Usual Suspects Francesco Sindico, Makane Moïse Mbengue, 2021-01-21 This book is based on the acknowledgment that climate change is a multifaceted challenge that requires action on the part of all stakeholders including civil society and the notion that climate change is at a tipping point with urgent measures needed in the next decade Against this background civil society is turning its attention to the courts as a means to directly influence climate action partly because of the global scepticism towards the progress of global climate action despite the ongoing implementation of the

Paris Agreement Focusing on the individual broadly representing civil society the book offers fresh perspectives on climate change litigation While most of the literature on climate change litigation examines the same specific jurisdictions mostly common law countries US and Australia in particular this book also considers specific countries in Asia Africa and Latin America with little or no climate change litigation It explores the reasons for the lack of litigation and discusses what measures should or could be taken to change this situation and push forward climate action Unlike other literature on the subject this book analyses climate change litigation using a scenario based methodology Combining rigorous academic analysis with a practical policy oriented focus the book provides valuable insights for a wide range of stakeholders interested in climate change litigation It appeals to civil society organisations around the world international organisations and law firms interested in climate change litigation

Fitness to Plead Ronnie Mackay, Warren Brookbanks, 2018-06-14 The law relating to fitness to plead is an increasingly important area of the criminal law While criminalization may be justified whenever an offender commits a sufficiently serious moral wrong requiring that he or she be called to account the doctrine of fitness to plead calls this principle into question in the case of a person who lacks the capacity or ability to participate meaningfully in a criminal trial In light of the emerging focus on capacity based approaches to decision making and the international human rights requirement that the law should treat defendants fairly this volume offers a benchmark for the theory and practice of fitness to plead providing readers with a unique opportunity to consider differing perspectives and debate on the future development and direction of a doctrine which has up till now been under discussed and under researched The fitness to plead rules stand as an exception to notions of public accountability for criminal wrongdoing yet despite the doctrine's long standing function in criminal procedure it has proven complex to apply in practice and has given rise to many varied legislative models and considerable litigation in different jurisdictions Particularly troublesome is the question of what is to be done with someone who has been found unfit to stand trial Here the law is required to balance the need to protect those defendants who are unable to participate effectively in their own trial whether permanently or for a defined period and the need to protect the public from people who may have caused serious social harm as a result of their antisocial behaviour The challenge for law reformers legislators and judges is to create rules that ensure that everyone who can properly be tried is tried while seeking to preserve confidence in the fairness of the legal system by ensuring that people who cannot properly engage in the criminal trial process are not forced to endure it
