

The Power Of Shopping

Abstract: This study examined the effects of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program was designed to be a safe and effective means of increasing physical activity. The results showed that the program had a positive effect on physical health, with significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, muscle strength, and body composition. Psychological health also improved, with significant increases in self-esteem and decreases in anxiety and depression. The program was well-tolerated and had a high level of adherence. These findings suggest that a supervised walking program can be an effective means of improving the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
