Module 1: Neurophysiology and Integration

Introduction

1. What is the function of the nervous system? The nervous system is responsible for coordinating and controlling the body's activities. It receives information from the environment and the body, processes it, and sends out instructions to the muscles and glands to respond.
2. What are the main components of the nervous system? The nervous system is composed of the brain, spinal cord, and peripheral nerves. The brain is the central processing unit, the spinal cord is the main communication pathway, and the peripheral nerves connect the brain and spinal cord to the rest of the body.
3. What is the function of the brain? The brain is the central processing unit of the nervous system. It receives information from the senses, processes it, and sends out instructions to the muscles and glands to respond. It is also responsible for controlling the body's internal organs and functions.
4. What is the function of the spinal cord? The spinal cord is the main communication pathway between the brain and the rest of the body. It carries information from the brain to the muscles and glands, and from the muscles and glands back to the brain.
5. What is the function of the peripheral nerves? The peripheral nerves are the network of nerves that connect the brain and spinal cord to the rest of the body. They carry information from the brain and spinal cord to the muscles and glands, and from the muscles and glands back to the brain and spinal cord.

4. What is the function of the sensory neurons? Sensory neurons are responsible for carrying information from the senses to the brain. They have receptors that detect changes in the environment and send signals to the brain.
5. What is the function of the motor neurons? Motor neurons are responsible for carrying information from the brain to the muscles and glands. They have effectors that cause the muscles and glands to respond.
6. What is the function of the interneurons? Interneurons are responsible for processing information within the brain and spinal cord. They receive signals from sensory neurons and send signals to motor neurons.
7. What is the function of the glial cells? Glial cells are support cells that provide nutrients and protection for the neurons. They also help to maintain the chemical environment of the nervous system.
