Dynamic and effective.

Figure 4.4 shows all the data as on the top. The figure itself offers something more interesting: profiles (stacking of the spectra) of each light source (see Table 4.4) across all the range of frequencies. It provides useful evidence to show the difference in the spectra of the two sources. When compared with Figure 4.3.10, it may be thought that the stacked spectrum structure does agree with the theoretical predictions. However, the spectra show that the spectrum is very well modelled, especially, considering the fact that they were treated comparatively easily (this is because, unlike diffraction gratings, most only use light to give a single order of diffraction from one grating). In fact, the fact that the spectra are so well modelled is a good indication that the data collected for the grating spectra are of good quality.
