There is the danger of this work not representing anything as being representative. It represents the findings from a small number of teachers and schools. It may be that some of the findings are not generalizable. But the point is, we're all probably concerned about the same issues. There is a need to know what is going on in the schools. We need to know what is going on in the schools. We need to know what is going on in the schools.

These two million copies of "The Fall" will reflect covered books in each category for prices no higher than existing prices, with some additional marketing, promotion, distribution, and editing (the publishers say). Meanwhile, your library's collection will be about 10% higher.
