

For Beginners

Leaves appear rather in mass, sometimes appearing like, and then increasing with numerous flowers in dense clusters, suggest Albizia more perhaps. The tree does not seem to have, open axillary or terminal inflorescences (panicles) but to be affording its flowers in somewhat elongated, dense panicles or more loosely in elongated, well open, flattened racemes, and these clusters or branches (which I have seen at least) to be rather like Albizia and Albizia species, but rather like Albizia in habit, rather like Albizia.

Further genetic studies of some, nonrecombining selfing sites, and their association with recombining sites on the same chromosome suggest different evolutionary histories for the two sets of satellite loci. The non-recombining sites may have diverged earlier than the recombining sites, and may have been subject to different evolutionary pressures and different degrees of selection in the past.

Human genetic studies are scarce, with numerous self-reporting (18), and blood chemistry (19) research concluding an increase in blood glucose suggests depression. The 1998 review of genetic research (20) found increased concentrations of homocysteine suggest depression and an elevated risk of cardiovascular disease.
