This diagram illustrates the exploded view of a mechanical assembly, possibly a pump or actuator. The main component is a large, complex housing with a central cylindrical section. To the left, there is a smaller, separate assembly consisting of a cylindrical body and a flange. Above the main housing, several long, thin components are shown, including what appears to be a piston rod, a connecting rod, and a crankshaft. A coiled spring is also visible. To the right of the main housing, there is a control lever or actuator arm with a curved end. The diagram is a technical line drawing, likely used for assembly instructions or parts identification.
