CONFIGURATION

The VMAX 40K array configurations are designed for extensive storage environments. The array configurations include at least one system bay that can house from one to eight engines, and a number of left or right populated storage bays, depending on the number of engines in the array. Angled into the one full-width bay with three drive rails, 170 (left), 170 (right), 170 (left), and 170 (right) are located in the array.

The maximum array configuration size depends on the type of drive array architecture chosen. If one 170-drive standard drive is used, the maximum array configuration includes an additional system bay and 17 storage bays. If two 170-drive (2 drive) bays are configured, the maximum configuration consists of a system bay and 170 storage bays. Both bay types can be used within the array but not within the same storage bay.

Each bay contains storage bays and associated hardware connected to a dedicated engine in the system bay. Depending on the size the bays connect to the engine, they are referred to as sub-engine or sub-engine 2 (S2).

System bay operates as an array management control interface for arrays with three or more engines. The second, physically separated system bay is used when a third (System 2), 170-drive (2), or second (System 2) is added to the array. This engine and its subsequent engines are added to the second system bay. The angled system bay placement is suitable for drive bays that cannot accommodate large, contiguous array placements. The maximum distance between both system bays is 21.0m (68.9 ft).
