It is important to note that the above results are only valid for the case where the system is linear. If the system is nonlinear, the above results are not valid. In this case, the system must be linearized around the operating point, and the linearized system must be used to calculate the results. This is done by using the Taylor series expansion of the system's output around the operating point. The linearized system is then used to calculate the results, and the results are compared to the results of the nonlinear system. This process is repeated until the results of the linearized system are close to the results of the nonlinear system.
