jurisdiction of the managing clerk whose errands and billets doux keep him employed on his way to carry writs to the bailiffs and petitions to the Courts He is akin to the street boy in his habits and to the pettifogger by fate The boy is almost always ruthless unbroken unmanageable a ribald rhymester impudent greedy and idle And yet almost all these clerkings have an old mother lodging on some fifth floor with whom they share their pittance of thirty or forty francs a month If he is a man why do you call him old Box coat asked Simonnin with the air of a schoolboy who has caught out his master And he went on eating his bread and cheese leaning his shoulder against the window jamb for he rested standing like a cab horse one of his legs raised and propped against the other on the toe of his shoe What trick can we play that cove said the third clerk whose name was Godeschal in a low voice pausing in the middle of a discourse he was extemporizing in an appeal engrossed by the fourth clerk of which copies were being made by two neophytes from the provinces Colonel Chabert Honore De
