Abstract

- [illegible]

These challenges require a variety of approaches to management, but I think you can see the general idea: greater mobility, or greater mobility opportunities, the development of alternative ^{transportation} modes, and the use of ^{flexible} work schedules. These approaches are being explored, and I think will become increasingly important. They I believe will allow the region to increasingly become a more dynamic, vibrant, and attractive place, and help the region to deal with the challenges that it faces. I think that's what we need to do.

In this part I didn't pay much attention to Family Geography. However, I did think of the term "community" when I thought of the two very basic elements of community: the community itself and the ^{people} who live in it.
