- 1. Identify the variables (independent, dependent, control, confounding) in the study.
 - Independent variable: the variable that is manipulated or varied by the researcher.
 - Dependent variable: the variable that is measured or observed.
 - Control variable: the variable that is held constant to prevent it from influencing the results.
 - Confounding variable: the variable that is not controlled for and may influence the results.
- 2. Formulate a hypothesis (a statement about the expected relationship between variables).
 - Directional hypothesis: predicts the direction of the relationship (e.g., "increased study time leads to higher scores").
 - Non-directional hypothesis: predicts a relationship but not the direction (e.g., "study time is related to scores").
- 3. Design the study (choose the appropriate research design, sampling method, and data collection method).
 - Research design: the overall plan for the study (e.g., experimental, correlational, descriptive).
 - Sampling method: the method used to select participants (e.g., random sampling, convenience sampling).
 - Data collection method: the method used to gather data (e.g., surveys, interviews, observations).
- 4. Collect and analyze the data (gather the data and use statistical tests to evaluate the hypothesis).
 - Data collection: the process of gathering the data from the participants.
 - Data analysis: the process of using statistical tests to evaluate the hypothesis.
- 5. Interpret the results (draw conclusions about the relationship between variables).
 - Conclusion: the final statement about the results of the study.
 - Limitations: the weaknesses or limitations of the study.
 - Future research: suggestions for further studies.

This system is designed to capture the essential (200–2000 Å) covered range, the one intended to capture the early to late optical spectra range. The multi-channel diffracting the light into a few channels in long spectrum. The light should be compressed on the right side of the detector but the last channel has an extra light transmitted by a dichroic mirror to the probe in the early to intermediate range. The light is filtered and then split into two channels for the two different detectors. To maximize the efficiency of the instrument during the early to intermediate range, the light should be split into two channels and then be combined into a single channel in the late optical range.
