The Cell Cycle - Mitosis

Stages of the Cell Cycle (I - PMAT - C)

Interphase
Interphase has three parts - G₁, S, and G₂. The cell grows during G₁, replicates DNA during S, and prepares for division during G₂.

Mitosis begins

Prophase
Chromatin condenses into visible chromosomes. In prokaryotes, the nucleoid is surrounded by a nuclear membrane. In eukaryotes, the nuclear envelope breaks down, and spindle fibers begin to form.

Metaphase
Chromosomes line up along the cell. Each chromosome is made of two sister chromatids. Spindle fibers attach to the centromeres.

Anaphase
Sister chromatids are pulled apart. The pieces are moved to opposite sides of the cell and become sister chromatids.

Telophase
The chromosomes reach the poles of the cell. Nuclear envelopes form around the two sets of chromosomes.

Cytokinesis

Cell Growth

Most cells are very small, between 1-100 µm in diameter. (For comparison, a strand of human hair is 70 µm in width.) Cells are small because they are limited by their surface area to volume ratio. As a cell grows, its volume increases faster than its surface area, and it begins to have difficulty transporting nutrients and waste. By remaining small, cells can manage a more efficient internal transport and communication system, that means that when a cell reaches its size limit, it must either stop growing or divide. The process of growing and dividing is known as the cell cycle.

Prokaryotic Cell Division
Prokaryotic cells divide by binary fission, which involves the replication of the single circular DNA molecule. During binary fission, the cell grows and then divides into two cells with the same genetic material.

Eukaryotic Cell Division
Eukaryotic cells divide by mitosis, which involves the replication of the DNA and the separation of the sister chromatids. During mitosis, the cell grows and then divides into two cells with the same genetic material.

The Purpose of Mitosis
The purpose of mitosis is to form identical daughter cells. Somatic cells are cells that make up the body of an organism. Mitosis creates the new cells that allow an organism to grow and, in adults, it also creates new cells to replace damaged cells. For example, the skin has a cell, meaning skin cells divided into new cells.
