The First Amerasians Yuri W. Doolan, 2024 During the 1950s thousands of mixed race children were born to US servicemen and local Korean women in US occupied South Korea Assumed to be the progeny of camptown women or military prostitutes their presence created a major problem for the image of US democracy in the world at a time when the nation was vying for Cold War allegiances abroad As mixed race children became a discernible population around US military encampments in South Korea communists seized upon the image of those left behind by their GI fathers as evidence of US imperialism irresponsibility and immorality in the Third World Aware of this and keen to redeem the image of America's intervention in Asia US citizens spearheading the postwar recovery of recently war torn South Korea embarked upon a campaign in US Congress to bring as many of these children home By the early 1960s American philanthropists missionaries and voluntary agencies had succeeded in constructing the figure of the abandoned and mistreated Amerasian orphan to lobby US Congress for the quick passage of intercountry adoption laws They also gained the sympathies of American families eager to welcome these racially different children into the intimate confines of their homes Although the adoptions of Korean Amerasian children helped to promote an image of humanitarian rescue and Cold War racial liberalism in 1950s and 1960s America there was one other problem many of these children were not actually orphans but had been living with their Korean mothers in the camptown communities surrounding US military bases prior to adoption Their placements into American families relied upon dehumanizing constructions of these women as hardened prostitutes who did not even love their own children South Korea as a backwards racist society bent upon Confucian tradition and pure bloodlines and the United States as a welcoming home in an era of intense racial segregation The First Amerasians tells the powerful oftentimes heartbreaking story of how Americans created and used the concept of the Amerasian to remove thousands of mixed race children from their Korean mothers to adoptive US homes during the 1950s and 1960s In doing so Yuri W Doolan reveals how the Amerasian is not simply a mixed race person fathered by a US serviceman in Asia nor a racial term used to describe individuals with one American and one Asian parent like its popular definition suggests Rather the Amerasian is a Cold War construct whose rescue has been utilized to repudiate accusations of US imperialism and achieve sentimental victories in the aftermath of wars not quite won by the military From such constructions Americans lobbied Congress twice first in the 1950s to establish international adoption laws that would lead to the placement of hundreds of thousands of Korean children in the United States then later in the 1980s when the plight of mixed race Koreans would be invoked again to argue for Amerasian immigration laws culminating in the migrations of tens of thousands of mixed race Vietnamese and their relatives Beyond Cold War historiography this book also shows how in using the figure of the mistreated and abandoned Amerasian in need of rescue Americans caused harm to actual people mixed race

Koreans and their mothers specifically as children were placed into adoptive homes during an era where few regulations or safeguards existed to protect them from abuse negligence or racial hostilities in the US and many Korean mothers were coerced both physically and monetarily to relinquish their children to American authorities

Spatial memory - a unique window into healthy and pathological ageing Thomas Wolbers,Paul A Dudchenko,Emma R Wood,2015-01-09 The global population aged over 60 is set to rise dramatically in the coming decades In many countries the older population now faces the prospect of spending a quarter of their lives aged over 65 and a significant proportion will have to cope with cognitive decline associated with normal ageing or with dementia disorders Given that these fundamental demographic changes will pose a significant challenge to health care systems a detailed understanding of age related cognitive and neurobiological changes is essential in helping elderly populations maintain cognitive performance In addition developing sensitive biomarkers to identify those at risk of developing dementia is crucial for early and effective interventions To make inferences about the ageing process from the animal model back to the human rigorous behavioral paradigms must be used to ensure that the same function is being examined across species Given that similar navigational paradigms can easily be applied to humans and animals recent years have seen an expansion of studies attempting to bridge the gap between age related changes in animal and human spatial cognition These studies begin to suggest that disruptions in spatial computations are among the earliest indicators of impending cognitive decline In addition although many animal studies have identified pathological mechanisms with paradigms involving spatial navigation these mechanisms support many nonspatial cognitive functions as well As a consequence a successful characterization of how spatial processing changes in the ageing brain could reveal fundamental effects of cognitive ageing that could inform about general mechanisms underlying decline in perception mnemonic processing and multisensory integration Handbook of Research on Communities of Practice for Organizational Management and Networking: Methodologies for Competitive Advantage Hern ez, Olga Rivera,Bueno Campos, Eduardo,2011-04-30 This book provides a sound understanding of the managerial implications of communities of practice as well as their opportunities and limits for knowledge management nota del editor Approximate Dynamic Programming Warren B.
