

Taking relationships to new heights

Technology infrastructure

When Boeing first commercially developed engines for new flight in 1988, it was still a relatively small company providing the propulsion. The 787 required a lot of work on how to integrate the engines and the technology infrastructure that would be needed to support the aircraft's operation. And the work was not done in isolation. Boeing's relationship with the engine manufacturers was critical to the success of the 787. From 1990 to 2000, Boeing worked closely with the engine manufacturers to develop the 787's engines. This partnership was a key factor in the success of the 787, as it allowed Boeing to develop the aircraft's engines in a way that was not possible for other aircraft manufacturers. The 787's engines are a testament to the power of partnership and collaboration in the aerospace industry.
