 the early 1970s the nuclear planning community has gradually come to agree that a strategy emphasizing the flexible and

 However serious problems continue to undermine U S preparations for a strategy of flexible employment Already tenuous the link between U S nuclear employment planning and force structure planning has been further weakened by strategic funding levels that have not been able to meet the demands that evolving U S strategy has placed on the posture In this paper the author argues for a new planning approach to reconnect force and employment planning that would without absolute guidance about war aims enhance deterrence and permit more effective response in the event of nuclear war This planning approach would 1 take realistic account of the strategic forces budget 2 consider the competitive effect of force planning on Soviet actions 3 be conducted over a long range horizon 4 have sufficient agility to keep the politics of strategic forces from excessively distorting the characteristics of specific programs and 5 use certain themes to shape force employment and acquisition decisions FMR ,2007 Iceland's Whaling Comeback Sandra Altherr,2003
