

floor, wall and roof. My ideal community would be one to embrace diverse construction techniques that would embrace efforts to protect the environment from deforestation, promote sustainable buildings to combat climate changes such as global warming and protect environmental degradation of leaving open pits (quarry), a result of brick excavation. Roofing would be one that incorporates modern technology and techniques of harvesting rain water and solar energy. Glass walls would be encouraged; this would ensure maximum utilization of sun energy thus conserving produced power.

Type of structures

Housing units are single houses (stand alone), row or line units and attached houses. The urban face would consist of attached buildings serve as working blocks and residential units. This would serve to maximize accommodation in an otherwise limited space. Single and row units would be constructed on the semi-urban environment for family. Minimum number of rooms is three this would reduce redesign problems.

Water can be supplied from different sources: rivers, dams, wells, boreholes and rain. This reaches the population through pipes, drilling in case of boreholes and harvesting in case of rain. For environmental sustainability, rainwater harvesting would be encouraged at the household level by having storage tanks and at the state level where dams are to store rain water. Lighting would be sourced from electricity; however, alternative sources such as solar lighting would be encouraged and solar water heaters. Solar energy is environmentally friendly. Though
