

Abstract: Phyllanthus niruri L. (Amaranthaceae) is a medicinal plant used in folk medicine to treat various ailments. The aim of this study was to evaluate the phytochemical and pharmacological properties of P. niruri L. The plant material was extracted with methanol, and the extract was analyzed for total phenolic content, flavonoid content, and antioxidant activity. The extract showed high levels of total phenolic content and flavonoid content, and it exhibited strong antioxidant activity. The extract was also tested for its anti-inflammatory and analgesic properties. The results showed that the extract had significant anti-inflammatory and analgesic effects. These findings suggest that P. niruri L. may be a valuable source of natural products for the development of new drugs.

Abstract

[illegible]

Although we make the assumption that though the two sets share the same basic structure, individuals and the individual states, different persons adopt individual differences in the way they adaptively (and nonadaptively) relate to the social environment, it is worth emphasizing that we are not assuming that individuals that share the same basic structure and states will necessarily have the same patterns of individual differences. In other words, we are assuming that individuals that share the same basic structure and states will necessarily have the same patterns of individual differences, but we are not assuming that individuals that share the same basic structure and states will necessarily have the same patterns of individual differences.

biochemistry, psychology, and other social sciences. It may be argued that the inclusion of non-scientific disciplines in the curriculum is not necessary for the education of a scientist. However, it is argued that a scientist should be able to communicate with the public and other scientists in a non-scientific language. The inclusion of non-scientific disciplines in the curriculum is therefore necessary for the education of a scientist.

Abstract The developmental course of maternal identity (MI) was examined in 100 women who became mothers in the first 10 years of life. The women were interviewed at 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100 months postpartum. The results showed that MI was a dynamic process that changed over time. The women who became mothers in the first 10 years of life had a more positive MI than those who became mothers later in life. The results also showed that the women who became mothers in the first 10 years of life had a more positive MI than those who became mothers later in life. The results also showed that the women who became mothers in the first 10 years of life had a more positive MI than those who became mothers later in life.

CONCLUSIONS

- a) Collect examples of differences and of similarities, which characterize family(ies) meeting best the idea of openness and genuine interest and listening.
- b) Identify the topics or questions that (meeting) behavior generally does not address (the statements of speaking, information, which gives some picture).
- c) Consider how each, with respect to family(ies) and its communication behavior, is characterized.
- d) Consider whether meeting family(ies) affect communication. Discuss the influence of family(ies) on communication.

Spuhler,2017-09-05 Genetic differences in humans like those between individuals of any animal or plant species and those between species are all products of the evolutionary development of the living world These differences with their behavioral consequences can only be understood in the light of evolution Our understanding of evolution however has itself evolved The Darwin Wallace theory of evolution appeared in the nineteenth century Since then development of evolutionary thought has gone through several stages The contributions in this volume describe those stages Coevolution William H. Durham,1991 Charles Darwin's On the Origins of Species had two principal goals to show that species had not been separately created and to show that natural selection had been the main force behind their proliferation and descent from common ancestors In Coevolution the author proposes a powerful new theory of cultural evolution that is of the descent with modification of the shared conceptual systems we call cultures that is parallel in many ways to Darwin's theory of organic evolution. The author suggests that a process of cultural selection or preservation by preference driven chiefly by choice or imposition depending on the circumstances has been the main but not exclusive force of cultural change. He shows that this process gives rise to five major patterns or modes in which cultural change is at odds with genetic change. Each of the five modes is discussed in some detail and its existence confirmed through one or more case studies chosen for their heuristic value, the robustness of their data and their broader implications. But Coevolution predicts not simply the existence of the five modes of gene-culture relations; it also predicts their relative importance in the ongoing dynamics of cultural change in particular cases. The case studies themselves are lucid and innovative reexaminations of an array of oft-pondered anthropological topics: plural marriage, sickle cell anemia, basic color terms, adult lactose absorption, incest taboos, headhunting and cannibalism. In a general case, the author's goal is to demonstrate that an evolutionary analysis of both genes and culture has much to contribute to our understanding of human diversity, particularly behavioral diversity, and thus to the resolution of age-old questions about nature and nurture: genes and culture.
