

Lesson 2

Lesson 2 Part 1: Introduction 🌱 Summarizing Informational Texts

LAFS
8.RI.1.2: ... provide an objective summary of the text.

Theme: Our Living Language

You've read a great article. How do you tell someone what it's about? You give a summary—a brief restatement, in your own words, of the most important ideas. The summary itself is objective, meaning you do not include your opinions, beliefs, or judgments.

Read the passage below. As you do, think about what you would include in a summary of it.

The influence of the Roman Empire was the single most important force in early Europe. Without the unifying effect of the Empire, regional or tribal differences would have prevailed, and Europe would have remained a land of separate states, each avoiding contact with the others.

Instead, Rome and its culture pulled the different areas together. Spain, for example, was a stable and secure part of the Roman Empire, and Roman culture had a strong influence there. Aqueducts, such as this one in Segovia, Spain, are examples of the Empire's expansive reach. A less visible sign of Roman influence is Spain's language, which is firmly rooted in Latin, the language of the Romans.

Read the passage again, this time underlining the central idea and supporting details. Then read the chart below to see how to summarize informational text.

By summarizing a text's central ideas and supporting details, you can check your understanding of and remember the most important points.
