The authors also discuss the importance of the design of the study. They note the potential danger of not having the data on the design included. If the research is intended for those who are designing a future research study, it is better to include the design as a separate descriptive report.

Finally, the authors note that the design of the study can also contribute to the validity of the research. They note that a study that is designed to be a descriptive study should be designed to be a descriptive study. They note that a study that is designed to be a descriptive study should be designed to be a descriptive study.

The data vary on the identity of these respondents, as data sources. Some use the same data source (telephone survey), consistently, around most of the period (like the authors' figures) and others change the data source (figures and surveys) during the study (for example, from one to about 10-15 surveys, for example, and for example, from one to about 10-15 surveys, for example).
