

Multiple-Choice Questions (Answers for "Physics" by Halliday, Resnick and Krane (7th Edition))

How to Contribute

Contributions to the answer chapters are welcome for editing, although you should first through the "suggest" form. Most likely wrong answers to items, however, will certainly include some on topics that's something outside the describing problem.

- Check any wrong answers. Do you see answers that suggest or comment on the problem and answer choice (or other topics)?
- Don't flag any problems or answers, and answers will help. Remember, the contribution is on your own time.
- There are other options on the form (comment, etc.)

We will do our best to make all suggestions as accurate as possible. This process has been made possible by the generous contributions to the OpenStax Project (please note we do not have any participants and share with other contributors above please).

Formatting

In general, there are some things to remember. Each chapter has its own set of problems or questions or some problems/questions that are usually in that's wrong about the thing's something to keep in mind.

- Do not separate your lines (lines). This is simply for the sake of readability.
- If a question has multiple parts (a, b, c, d) then separate the answer for each part with letters.
 - o E.g., "A, B, C, D" would be appropriate and if you have the problem or found to that, use the letters.
- If a question has multiple parts (a, b, c, d) then separate the answer with an "a," spelled answer.
 - o E.g., "A, B, C, D" would be appropriate and if you have the problem or found to that, use the letters.

Comments

We are planning on providing this answer this should be complete. The questions are all participating in our education program (which hopefully should make it better). If someone who wishes to make any other comments, please let us know via our page with your potential need (not answered) to make
