Indicative content

(Candidates' responses may include)

The headline is effective because:

- It uses a large font and a colon which makes the reader pause for dramatic effect.
- It tells the reader what the text is about: that miners have been trapped and that the incident took place in Chile.
- The headline offers further detail - that the miners are in a safe place of 'refuge' and that the drill which will play a part in their 'rescue' has reached them.
- The headline is effective also because it has used attention - 'rescue', 'reaches', 'refuge' which is eye-catching and adds emphasis and drama to the headline.
- The words 'at last' imply that the rescue effort has been a long one, which is confirmed in the text. The word 'drill' is a pun meaning the mechanical tool and the effortful process which characterised the rescue attempt.
- The words 'trapped', 'rescue' and 'refuge' might also be explained with their effects.

The picture is effective because:

- It is brightly coloured and the colours contrast.
- It shows the desolate or harsh countryside where the miners are trapped.
- It shows a reporter and a clown celebrating the news by being about to embrace. The reporter holds a microphone so he is radio or TV, his picture is more obviously relevant because he is reporting the story.
- The clown is carrying what we assume to be the Chilean flag with things written on it. The clown is eye-catching, unusual, maybe bizarre and his place is less obvious. Interpretations might be: to represent celebration, happiness, colour compared to the surroundings, a carnival atmosphere of relief, etc. A very good interpretation would be that since the text speaks of the 'media onslaught' which we call a 'media circus' - the reporter represents the media and the clown represents the circus.

Links to the text:

- The text explains what the headline means especially the words 'refuge' and 'at last' with details about the time scale.
- The text relates to the picture because it refers to 'celebration', 'journalists', 'remote tribute' and 'media onslaught'.
