environments Crustacea and Arthropod Relationships written by a team of internationally recognized experts presents a wide variety of viewpoints while offering an up to date summary of recent progress across several disciplines With rich detail and vibrancy it addresses the evolution and phylogenetic relationships of the Arthropoda based upon molecular developmental morphological and paleontological evidence Volume 16 is the first in the series to not be exclusively dedicated to discussions specific to crustaceans While it is still crustaceo centric the focus of this volume has been extended to include other groups of arthropods along with the Crustacea This wider focus offers challenging opportunities to evaluate higher level relationships within the Arthropoda from a carcinologic perspective This volume is dedicated to the career of Frederick R Schram the founding editor of CrustaceanIssues in 1983 in recognition of his many stimulating and wide ranging contributions to the evolutionary biology of arthropods in general and of crustaceans in particular
