

Forces, Rivers, and Wind

Offices tend to make Forces an introductory subject. The objective would be to build progressively on concepts within various contexts/frames/complexity, not necessarily.

Example 1:

The path of upstream motion is affected by the faster upstream flow. Multiple red arrows represent the wind.

Example 2:

This velocity is the velocity of the boat in the water, not the velocity of the boat in the air.

Example 3:

Navigation is the fastest when the boat is moving in the same direction as the river. The fastest direction is the direction of the river.

$$v_{\text{boat}} + v_{\text{river}} = v$$

There, it and the velocity for the boat, adding at a moving object, and it is the velocity showing the relative velocity of velocity in direction.

Example 4:

This direction for velocity vector is still a relative velocity from the positive x-axis.

The magnitude of each vector is given by the speed of the boat.

1. An example of velocity is represented by a vector pointing at an angle of 30 degrees from the horizontal. But the vector pointing at an angle of 30 degrees from the horizontal is not the same as the vector pointing at an angle of 30 degrees from the horizontal. The vector pointing at an angle of 30 degrees from the horizontal is not the same as the vector pointing at an angle of 30 degrees from the horizontal.

| Vector  | Direction | Speed | Angle                    |
|---------|-----------|-------|--------------------------|
| 10      | 10 mph    | 10    | $\langle 10, 0 \rangle$  |
| 10      | 10 mph    | 0     | $\langle 0, 10 \rangle$  |
| 10 + 10 | 20 mph    | 10    | $\langle 10, 10 \rangle$ |

The vector would actually be 10 mph, at an angle of 30 degrees from the horizontal.
