Long Answer Questions

33. Fractional distillation is suitable for separation of miscible liquids with a boiling point difference of about 25 K or less. What part of fractional distillation apparatus makes it efficient and possess an advantage over a simple distillation process. Explain using a diagram.

Soln:

Fractional column is the most important of fractional distillation apparatus. It is provided with glass beads in it. This column helps to obstruct the upward movement of the vapours of the two liquids. The vapours of high boiling liquid gets condensed earlier at lower level. Latent heat released helps to take the vapours of low boiling liquid to a height in the fractionating column.
