The Search for the Flat Ness Monster Ron Whittaker, 2016-03-04 When he first began the ICT Ron envisioned that it would take from five to ten years to complete the trail He had the feeling that when he signed up for his first ICT hike that he was about to step into the company of some elite hikers It was very humbling for him to struggle along for thirteen miles that day always the last one down the trail trying to catch up to the others Asthma made him much slower than most hikers As his journey progressed he met another hiker who was on the same quest Together they hiked about half of Idaho He had much to learn about traveling in wilderness areas Over time his conditioning skills and confidence improved and he began to venture on solo hikes His journey across Idaho was not a continuous line of progress He completed the trail in the most random and hopscotch fashion that one could imagine Along the way there were many interesting experiences and encounters including a near fatal slide in the snow that almost ended the quest Despite sometimes slow progress frustrating setbacks and physical limitations he was able to experience the diverse and incredibly beautiful state of Idaho with its ever changing topography and climate He traveled the high deserts of the south the Snake River plains the Sawtooth Wilderness the massive Salmon River canyon the Gospel Hump Wilderness the highlands of the Idaho Montana Stateline Trail the panhandle territory the Selkirk range the shores of Priest Lake and arrived at last at Upper Priest River waterfall It was a defining journey for Ron He highly recommends the Idaho Centennial Trail to any prospective person who is considering either a thru hike or a project of several years
