

Homeostasis (pp. 72-83)

Organisms develop internal mechanisms, often hormonally-mediated, to maintain internal homeostasis.

A regulated variable must be maintained within a normal range of values, relative to set point, or reference level.

List 4 examples of regulated variables (body homeostasis).

- 1) Temperature
- 2) Blood glucose and composition of body fluids
- 3) Mineral Ions (electrolytes)
- 4) Blood Pressure

Homeostasis is described as a state of homeostatic balance.

Homeostasis is a negative feedback mechanism.

Regulated variable is restored back regulated variable within a normal range, reducing any variation between set point and the variable. It is a reverse response to a stimulus.

Regulated variable is restored to set point, reverse response, and variable.

A stimulus increases or decreases the variable by producing an signal from the control system. Homeostasis returns the regulated variable to the normal range.

In the body, stimuli include environmental, chemical body composition and neural signals for a specific homeostatic response. They activate receptors, which sense change or level of some that body responding to the stimulus is then the set point.

Receptors transmit an electrical message through neurons of the body's control system.

Regulated variable homeostatic response and then body return to homeostasis. Restoring the response.
