

Enzymes and Cellular Regulation

What are the biochemical regulatory factors which regulate metabolism?

What?

Digestive enzymes are protein based biological catalysts that play a significant role in our lives. They help convert substances in our diets into smaller pieces, such as monosaccharides. Fermentation allows them to absorb various nutrients. Enzymes, however, do not work with substrates. They are made up of a single component, called a free component. They are made from a whole substance or several substances. In this article, we will look at the general conditions for two different enzymes. The digestive enzyme, lipase, is made by the pancreas and breaks down lipids in the small intestine. While gastric breakdown occurs in the stomach.

Model 1 – Two Digestive Enzymes
