Making Histories Paul Ashton,Tanya Evans,Paula Hamilton,2020-09-21 If historical culture is the specific and particular ways that a society engages with its past this book aims to situate the professional practice of public history now emerging across the world within that framework It links the increasingly varied practices of memory and history making such as genealogy podcasting re enactment family histories memoir writing film making and facebook histories with the work that professional historians do both in and out of the academy Making Histories asks questions about the role of the expert and notions of authority within a landscape that is increasingly concerned with connection to the past and authenticity The book is divided into four parts 1 Resistance Rights Authority 2 Memory Memorialization Commemoration 3 Performance Transmission Reception 4 Family Private Self The four sections outline major themes emerging in public history across the world in the 21st century which are all underpinned by the impact of new media on historical practice and our central argument for the volume which advocates a more capacious definition of what constitutes public history

The Best For My Child: Did the market really deliver? Fiona Millar,2018-05-21 Parent choice diversity of school provision and the idea of a quasi market in schools have dominated education policy for the last thirty years since the passage of the 1988 Great Education Reform Act But has the market worked in the way that was intended Are schools better Do we have a fairer school system Do parents really have choice Author and journalist Fiona Millar looks at why these policies have proved so seductive to a generation of politicians and seeks to uncover whether we really are doing the best for all our children If we are not what future reform could and should look like This is an area that has preoccupied me since the early 1990s when my own children s school was one of the first to be named and shamed by Ofsted explains Millar We had first hand experience of how the market worked in practice so this is an area I have followed with close interest every since Thirty years on from the 1988 Act I feel we are ready for a new approach but that is important to understand what worked and what could be better I hope my book will help to answer those questions

Testing Times Willis Richard, 2014-02-07 This book focuses on the delivery of public examinations offered by the main examining boards in England since Victorian England The investigation reveals that the provision of examinations was as controversial in the nineteenth century as it is today particularly since the government is now determined to bring in reform The issues of grade inflation the place of coursework in marking and the introduction of technological change all feature in this book Educational policy is primarily examined as well as some reference to the global scene The study analyses archival material from a wide range of sources including those records stored at the National Archives and the London Metropolitan Archives An emphasis is placed upon the various institutions that contributed to the process including the Royal Society of Arts the London Chamber of Commerce the City of Guilds of London Institute and the University of London Attention is given to the findings of the Taunton Commission and the Bryce Commission and shorter reports such as the Northcote Trevelyn Report which served to radicalise entry and recruitment to the Civil Service The modern GCSE and the plans for I levels are considered and key observations are made about the efficacy of those examinations offered by Oxford and Cambridge universities and O levels A levels and NVQs The reader is given every opportunity to benefit enthusiastically in this account of examinations and those engaged in education whether teachers examiners students or administrators will be able to gain useful insights into the workings of the examination system

Remembering the First World War Bart Ziino, 2014-12-05 Remembering the First World War brings together a group of international scholars to understand how and why the past quarter of a century has witnessed such an extraordinary increase in global popular and academic interest in the First World War both as an event and in the ways it is remembered The book discusses this phenomenon across three key areas The first section looks at family history genealogy and the First World War seeking to understand the power of family history in shaping and reshaping remembrance of the War at the smallest levels as well as popular media and the continuing role of the state and its agencies The second part discusses practices of remembering and the more public forms of representation and negotiation through film literature museums monuments and heritage sites focusing on agency in representing and remembering war The third section covers the return of the War and the increasing determination among individuals to acknowledge and participate in public rituals of remembrance with their own contemporary politics What for instance does it mean to wear a poppy on armistice remembrance day How do symbols like this operate today These chapters will investigate these aspects through a series of case studies Placing remembrance of the First World War in its longer historical and broader transnational context and including illustrations and an afterword by Professor David Reynolds this is the ideal book for all those interested in the history of the Great War and its aftermath
