Abstracting Systems for Informational Object Management—This paper presents a new approach to the design of abstracting systems for the management of informational objects. The approach is based on the use of a formal language for the description of informational objects and their relationships. The language is designed to be simple and intuitive, and to be able to express a wide range of relationships between objects. The paper describes the design of the language and the implementation of the abstracting system. The system is able to manage a large number of objects and their relationships, and to provide a variety of queries and reports.
