

Respiration Article & Follow-Up Questions

CELLULAR RESPIRATION

All living things need energy to survive and carry out life processes. Whether an organism makes its own food through photosynthesis or eats another organism for food, all organisms* use the same process to turn their food into usable energy. This process is called cellular respiration.

Mitochondrion

Cellular respiration is a chemical reaction that happens in an organelle called the mitochondrion (plural: mitochondria). Mitochondria are found in the cells of nearly every organism on Earth. While almost all cells in the human body contain mitochondria, cells that require a lot of energy, such as muscle cells, can contain hundreds or thousands of them.

All organisms need a source of food. In the cellular respiration, plants are performing photosynthesis to make glucose. Cells use glucose for energy. The process of cellular respiration is a chemical reaction that occurs in the mitochondria. It involves the breakdown of glucose into carbon dioxide and water, releasing energy in the form of ATP.

Cellular respiration is a complex process that involves several steps: glycolysis, the citric acid cycle, and oxidative phosphorylation. At the end of glycolysis, the cell has harvested some energy in the form of ATP (adenosine triphosphate). Carbon dioxide (CO_2) and water (H_2O) are produced as waste products from this reaction. In general, animals breathe out the waste products carbon dioxide and water (as water vapor) when they exhale. Plants use the carbon dioxide and water to perform photosynthesis to make more glucose for an energy source. Excess water may leave the plant stomata in a process called transpiration.

*There are some exceptions to this. Some organisms in extreme environments use a different process to generate energy.

Name _____

Read the article and then answer the questions below.

Use the dictionary to define the following terms:

Photosynthesis _____

Cellular respiration _____

Mitochondrion _____

Cellular respiration _____

After a chemical reaction, new materials are formed. Write the chemical formula for each of the products. The first one has been completed as an example.

O_2

Glucose _____

Carbon Dioxide _____

The formulas above represent atoms of an element. H = hydrogen, O = oxygen. What do you notice about the elements that are in the reactants of the reaction? Are there any new elements that are present in the products?

Diagram using the following terms: glucose, oxygen, water, glucose, energy.

(ATP)
