Terry Eagleton (1943 -)

The role of literature in society

Eagleton points to a pessimistic shift from literature containing a "generosity and [...] noble aspiration" in their reader (Arnold 1866) to it being a "powerful tool of social control of the middle and working classes in the Victorian Era (Eagleton 1980).

Marxist communication on literary theory:

- Elitist concept of ideology vs literature
 - Assumes that literature does not reflect but actively generates ideology
 - Therefore, the study of literature is political
- The growth of the study of literature coincides with "the fall of religion" in the Victorian Era due to the "new impacts" of:
- Scientific discoveries (geocentrism (1543), germ theory of disease (1850s), Darwin)
 - Social changes: Factory Act, Public Health Act, Education Act, Married Women's Property Act, Matrimonial

The Power of Religion

- Used by the ruling class to control the masses through ideology; that is, less by specific rules and more by visual and mythology
- Religion is affective (poetry, religion, art) and experienced (based on one's experiences) → emotional bonds hard to break

Literature "as an Ideology"

Provides "narrative truths" to support the pillars of the social situation:

- Power in nation, language, and culture
 - Resistance for subversiveness
 - Sense of position within society
 - An escape – by virtual experience – into another place or life
- This can also make explicit in who it was designed for:
- "writing men's ideologies"
 - women who sought to become school teachers
 - army men during the colonial period

Class according to Socrates

Socrates → Plato → Aristotle

- His known works of Socrates
- It is assumed that Plato took many ideas from Socrates
- Socrates is a key figure in the Republic/middle-class of Plato
- Plato founded the Academy in 387 BCE, an institution devoted to research and instruction in philosophy and the sciences (mathematics and logic) for the "philosophoi" (philosophers, "knowers") of society.
- Aristotle was Plato's pupil at the Academy and eventually became its teacher himself

Plato (c. 427-347 BCE)

Aristotle against Plato

"Representation is natural to human beings from childhood. They differ from the other animals in that man tends most towards representation and learns this first reason through representation."

"Also everyone delights in representations [...] This class of this is that learning is most pleasant [...] they delight in seeing images, because it conveys about that they learn as they observe, and infer what each thing is, e.g. that this person [represents] that one" (305)

How To Cheat On Plato Biology:

Biology and Christian Ethics Stephen R. L. Clark,2000-09-18 This stimulating and wide ranging book mounts a profound enquiry into some of the most pressing questions of our age by examining the relationship between biological science and Christianity The history of biological discovery is explored from the point of view of a leading philosopher and ethicist What effect should modern biological theory and practice have on Christian understanding of ethics How much of that theory and practice should Christians endorse Can Christians for example agree that biological changes are not governed by transcendent values or that there are no clear or essential boundaries between species To what extent can Nature set our standards Professor Clark takes a reasoned look at biological theory since Darwin and argues that an orthodox Christian philosophy is better able to accommodate the truth of such theory than is the sort of progressive meliorist interpretation of Christian doctrine which is usually offered as the properly modern option
