Unauthorised tapping into or hacking of mobile communications Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Home Affairs Committee,2011-10-28 The Commons Home Affairs Committee deplores News International s attempt to deliberately thwart the original investigation into phone hacking in 2005 06 but also states that the police set aside a huge amount of material that could have identified other perpetrators and victims The committee agrees with John Yates s own assessment that his 2009 review of this investigation was very poor that he did not ask the right questions and that he was guilty of a serious misjudgement The committee criticises Andy Hayman s cavalier attitude towards his contacts with those in

News International who were under investigation which even if entirely above board risked seriously undermining confidence in the impartiality of the police and accuses him of deliberate prevarication in order to mislead the committee It urges the swift and thorough investigation of allegations that payments were made to police officers by the media which will help to establish whether or not such payments may have influenced police inquiries into phone hacking The committee welcomes DAC Sue Akers s decision to contact all potential victims of phone hacking by the News of the World as part of the current investigation but is alarmed that only 170 have as yet been informed At this rate it would take years to inform all of the several thousands of people potentially affected The committee therefore recommends that extra resources are allocated to her investigation by the Government directly if necessary The committee also expresses concern about both the scope and understanding of current laws on phone hacking with prosecutors and police still arguing over the meaning of relevant sections of the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 However this was no reason for the Metropolitan Police to limit their investigation of these matters Finally potential victims of phone hacking should be given a means of seeking formal advice from the Information Commissioner and easier access to redress The Information Commissioner should be given additional powers to deal with breaches of data protection including phone hacking and blagging Mobile phone companies should give greater prominence to security advice in the information provided to their customers The report sets out 24 conclusions and recommendations

DDR and SSR in War-to-Peace Transition Christopher von Dyck, 2016-05-03 While disarmament demobilization and reintegration DDR and security sector reform SSR have become integral statebuilding tools in post conflict states the existing empirical literature examining their relationship has focused on supply side considerations related to the programming of both processes In practice though DDR and SSR are implemented in the wider context of war to peace transitions where the state is attempting to establish a monopoly over the use of force and legitimize itself in the eyes of domestic and international communities This paper therefore assumes that to identify opportunities and constraints for establishing closer practical linkages between DDR and SSR it is important to take the local politics into consideration It examines two past externally driven peacebuilding interventions in West Africa namely Liberia and Sierra Leone featuring cases in which the central state had essentially fragmented or collapsed Through this comparative analysis the paper aims to provide a stepping stone for future studies examining demand side considerations of DDR and SSR in post conflict contexts
