

Case Study: Rhino Poaching in South Africa

Abstract

Wildlife tourism attracts substantial numbers of tourists worldwide with Africa as the major wildlife viewing destination. It is the home for animals like rhino which holds 80% of the world's rhino population. Rapid increase in rhino poaching activities has reached a crisis point and attracting global attention. In this case study author has mentioned current situation in Kruger national park, its consequences and solutions for the same.

South African National Parks (SAN parks) is one of the scientific research group in the world which manages twenty parks in eight provinces at about 3700,000 hector in South African land and serve the significant role in the functioning of the conserving sectors of a natural heritage intended to develop couple conservation with social and economic development across the rural areas. It was established in 1898 aiming to protect wildlife of South Africa. The main objective was to create safe heaven for the black and white rhinos to prevent extinction and maintain good trend of park running hundreds of South African animal species in SAN parks, provide professional service related to capture, translocation, holding and provide ethical values to wildlife.

Their strategy is "to ensure sustainability and responsible tourism growth, while enhancing our vision of connecting our national parks to globe". In terms of economic movement, SAN parks had maximized sales by concentrating on high value species. In 2009, the organization has made 500 sales of rhinos in South Africa while Kruger National Park claimed 252 transactions and revenues of 7.0 billion were generated at an average price of $30,300 with three auctions were held by SAN parks. About 6.9 billion USD were the estimated revenue generated from tourist attraction and 70% of the total amount was generated from hunting. South Africa is the home for the rhinos in the world and that incredibly important country for their conservation but poaching levels have dramatically increased over the last few years.

Kruger has connected globally by partnering with zoos and parks to provide rhino. Kruger has also grown their tourism business but not enough to offset increased expenses. Competition has grown as well and is able to offer hunting packages that take visitors away from Kruger. Their strategy to ensure sustainability has been strained in recent years due to government funding cuts. Kruger National Park has offset costs by sellin

Operation Lock and the War on Rhino Poaching John Hanks, 2015-05-08 The aggressive poaching of rhinos needs to be countered with equal aggression So argued Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands the founder president of the World Wide Fund for Nature WWF at a 1987 meeting with John Hanks conservation expert and WWF's head in Africa The result was Operation Lock a secret initiative funded by Prince Bernhard and staffed by former SAS operatives Operation Lock set up headquarters in Johannesburg and extended its reach into neighbouring states Namibia Zambia Botswana Swaziland and Mozambique Its operatives planned to train game rangers to pose as rhino horn traders in order to entrap buyers and to expose the kingpins who were driving the trade It was a controversial approach all the more because it was working within apartheid South Africa in the late 1980s When the existence of the project was finally leaked WWF denied any involvement and John Hanks took the fall In Operation Lock and the War on Rhino Poaching John Hanks finally tells the story of these explosive events from 25 years ago As a leading international authority on conservation he also deals with the scourge of rhino poaching up to the present and gives powerful and controversial criticism of some of the current policies to curb poaching Killing for Profit Julian

Whilst poaching has been seen as a biological or conservation topic in the past criminologists around the world have now started to delve into the topic. The poaching of wildlife and more so in recent years rhino poaching has been a concern in South Africa. South Africa has seen an increase in rhino poaching in the past 8 years where over 4 000 rhinos have been slaughtered. This research aims to give insight into the current rhino poaching epidemic in South Africa and looks at the problem from a criminological point of view where possible solutions can be recommended using criminological theories for the prevention of rhino poaching.

Rhino poaching in South Africa and India's major range states have been remarkably similar over time. Organised criminal syndicates manage an illegal supply chain of rhino horns from poachers, middlemen and corrupt authorities to East Asian black markets. In this paper we use rhino poaching data from South Africa and India to examine the plausibility of transnational links and coordination in their supplies of rhino horns. We develop an innovative model of oligopolistic collusion in supply and find empirical evidence to support the theory while controlling for rhino horn demand, features, corruption, governance, quality and conservation policy. Furthermore, we propose an inventory management model of a criminal syndicate that controls the horn supply chain. The method retraces and forecasts black market prices and has potential applicability in estimating supply or demand elasticities. This paper is the first to suggest an oligopolistic feature of the poaching industry. It highlights the need to reorient conservation policy to account for possible coordination of rhino horn supplies between range states.

Predictive Policing in an Endangered Species Context Hildergarde Suzanne Koen, 2017

Approximately three rhinos are poached daily in South Africa. Rhino poaching is a serious problem that affects not only the rhino population of South Africa but also the rhino population of the world. South Africa has the largest rhino population and of those rhinos the largest number can be found in the Kruger National Park (KNP). The KNP has been hit the hardest by the poaching epidemic, losing 1 175 rhinos in 2015 alone. Two big challenges are the size of the park and the unknown locations of both the poachers and new poaching events. The KNP is the size of a small country and there are simply not enough rangers to patrol this area effectively. A costly solution would be to employ more rangers but a proposed alternative is to reduce the search space and thus ensure that the rangers are allocated to the high risk areas first. A mathematical model was developed in the form of a Bayesian network (BN) to infer the most important factors contributing to poaching events and to model the rhino poaching problem. This model can be used to predict the area in which a future poaching attack could take place and thereby reduce the search area of rangers. The model also serves as a vehicle to enhance the understanding of the problem and encourage reasoning and discussion amongst decision makers. The map of the KNP is divided into cells and each cell is given a poaching probability based on the outcome of the BN. This probability map forms a heat map that can be shown to the control centre and rangers can then be sent to the respective hotspots on the map This is a proactive approach which is in stark contrast to the numerous reactive approaches attempted thus far This is the first BN modelling approach to the rhino poaching problem and it is also the first BN application to wildlife crime Previous applications of BN have only gone so far as environmental modelling but not wildlife crimes In this study the rhino poaching problem was shifted from a complex ill structured space to a position where researchers can begin to address the underlying problems by using a causal model as the vehicle for understanding the complex interplay between the factors affecting poaching events
