1980s and early 1990s to uncover how the radio industry facilitated hip hop's introduction into the musical mainstream. Constructed primarily by the Top 40 radio format, the musical mainstream featured mostly white artists for mostly white audiences. With the introduction of hip hop to these programs, the radio industry was fundamentally altered as stations struggled to incorporate the genre's diverse audience. At the same time as artists negotiated expanding audiences and industry pressure to make songs fit within the confines of radio formats, the sound of hip hop changed. Drawing from archival research, Amy Coddington shows how the racial structuring of the radio industry influenced the way hip hop was sold to the American public and how the genre's growing popularity transformed ideas about who constitutes the mainstream. The author gratefully acknowledges the AMS 75 PAYS Fund of the American Musicological Society supported in part by the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation. Public Participation Policy and Guidance Manual Joyce A. Whiten, 1990. Black and Brown Education in America Samina Hadi-Tabassum, Persis Driver, 2023-01-30. Black and Brown Education in America: Integration in Schools, Neighborhoods, and Communities is a decade-long ethnographic study of Maywood, Illinois, and the impact of its recent demographic shift from a historically Black middle-class suburb outside of Chicago with roots in the Black Panther Party to now a community with a growing Latinx population. It explores the intersection of race, culture, and language and the ensuing Black-Brown identity politics, as well as the role of community organizations such as interracial faith-based churches and embattled school boards. Against a backdrop of racial tensions and heightened violence, the book also addresses transformative liminal spaces where coalition building and collaboration bring the Black and Latinx communities together around common causes and unified goals. Technical Quarterly, 1995.
