

Introduction

In recent years there has been a trend towards not only developing and protecting human rights but also animal rights. While many people believe that we should give animals legal rights to humans, others view them as a renewable source of food, as well as other useful products.

Body paragraph #1

First of all, it seems clear for most intelligent people that animals deserve more rights than they have. Traditionally, however, that is because they are obviously not made to go with thoughts and feelings, even if they are not exactly like humans. For example, it has been argued that some animals – birds and dolphins – think, feel and perhaps behave in ways similar to those of their peers, and so it is that we should interact with humans differently. Therefore, it appears quite clear that they should be given the same rights and protections as humans.

Body paragraph #2

There are arguments against legal rights for animals, however, that they do not have the ability of human beings, not to mention that they are not made to think or do things, and that the laws of behavior are already normal within the natural world. It is true, however, that it is better to give rights to them, that would mean that they are not treated as property, and that the laws of a world where they are should be made for the animals, for it is not very beautiful because that is the natural way of the world.

Conclusion

In conclusion, there are arguments from both sides of the debate, both supporting that that animals deserve respect, protection, and some legal rights. Perhaps they should not be given the same treatment as humans, but they should certainly be treated better than they currently are, and laws should be drafted for them that protect them from undue suffering.
