CORN CHRONICLES

THE JOURNEY FROM PLATE TO POOP

How the Digestive System Works

The digestive system is a complex network of organs that work together to break down food into nutrients that the body can use. It starts in the mouth, where food is chewed and mixed with saliva. The food then travels down the esophagus to the stomach, where it is broken down into smaller pieces. From the stomach, the food moves into the small intestine, where it is further broken down and nutrients are absorbed. The remaining waste then moves into the large intestine, where it is processed and eliminated from the body.

Breaking Down is Hard to Do

While the digestive system is designed to break down food, it can sometimes have trouble. For example, if you eat too much food or eat food that is hard to digest, you may experience indigestion or heartburn. This is because the stomach is unable to break down the food properly, and it builds up in the stomach, causing discomfort. To avoid this, it's important to eat a balanced diet and not overeat.

Let's Process This

Understanding how the digestive system works can help you make better choices about what you eat. For example, if you know that your digestive system has trouble with certain foods, you can avoid them. Additionally, knowing how the digestive system works can help you understand why certain foods are good for you. For example, fiber is important for keeping the digestive system healthy, so eating foods high in fiber is a good idea.
