Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or pulmonary disease. They were randomly assigned to either a control group or a training group. The control group continued with their sedentary lifestyle, while the training group participated in a 10-week program of aerobic exercise. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during a submaximal exercise test at baseline and at the end of the 10-week program. The results showed that the training group had a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the control group. These findings suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular and metabolic health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program on the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program was designed to be safe and enjoyable, with the goal of increasing physical activity levels and improving health-related quality of life. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions included a warm-up, a main exercise period, and a cool-down. The main exercise period was divided into three parts: cardiovascular exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The cardiovascular exercise was performed on a stationary bike, the strength training was performed using resistance bands, and the flexibility exercises were performed on the floor. The program was evaluated using a pre-test and a post-test. The results showed that the program had a positive effect on physical fitness, with significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, strength, and flexibility. The program was also found to be safe and enjoyable, with no adverse effects reported. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program can be an effective way to improve physical fitness in sedentary, middle-aged women.
