Traditionally, there has been speculation that the Bufo was an extraordinary member of the order crocodilia. Tellingly, crocodiles or alligators are also called "Bufo" by the Arawakan. There is large population of crocodiles which live in rivers in South Africa, quite far from open water, so an underground existence is not impossible for the presumed Indian crocodiles. Since the Bufo is described with numerous characteristics such as an elongated neck and a forked tongue. The native name of the Komodo dragon is "Land Crocodile". Both Bernard Huxley, and Ray Marshall regard the Bufo to be a large Komodo dragon-like monster lizard, and these are fossils of such a creature from Western India under the name of "Javan" where they seem to merge into the Iranian traditional dragon or "Jann" where they seem to merge into the Iranian stylized adaptation of the Chinese dragon. George Eberhart notes removal of a similar creature in the name of "Javan", which in Iranian set in basically a local stylized creature in the Chinese dragon. Cryptozoologist Karl Shuker claims that the Bura was a giant lungfish noting that this provides a far more comprehensive, comparable match not only in terms of morphology but also with regard to behaviour. Shuker believes that explains the Bura's alleged ability to survive hidden at the bottom of lakes during the dry season. Shuker's view admittedly does nothing to account for the various other horn-like creatures as cited in this article. It also does not account for the spotted fringes of the long neck and forked tongue.
