expensive. For a faster charge, you can use a higher amperage charger, but don't use one rated more than 1/10th the amp-hour rating of the battery. Rapid boost charges that claim to restore the power of the battery in less than two hours are based on the battery and can damage batteries not in good condition. The type of charging should only be used in emergency situations.

11. The average time necessary to charge a battery should be listed in the instructions that come with the charger. As a general rule, a motor-charger will charge a battery in 12 to 16 hours.

12. Remove all the cell caps (if equipped) and cover the holes with a clean cloth to prevent splashing electrolyte. Reconnect the negative battery cable and hook the battery charger cable across up to the battery post opposite in position. Negative to negative; then plug in the charger. Make sure it is set at 10 volts if it has a voltage switch.

13. If you're using a charger with a rate higher than two amps, check the battery regularly during charging to make sure it doesn't overheat. If you're using a three-charge, you can safely let the battery charge overnight after you've checked it regularly for the first couple of hours.

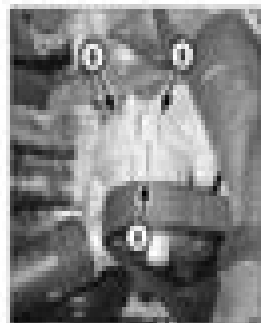

14. If the battery has terminals cast into, remove the specific gaskets with a hydraulic steel punch that during the last few hours of the charging cycle. Hydraulics are available independently from auto parts stores. Follow the instructions that come with the hydraulic. For Corbin's battery charger, clean them for a charge in the specific gaskets leading the two hours into the electrolyte in the cells is pouring bubbling freely. The specific gaskets leading from each cell should be very close to the others. If not, the battery probably has a leak.

15. Some batteries with sealed tops have built-in hydrometers on the top that indicate the state of charge by the color treatment in the hydrometer window. Normally, a bright-colored hydrometer indicates a full charge and a dark hydrometer indicates the battery still needs charging.

16. If the battery has a sealed top and no built-in hydrometer, you can hook up a digital voltmeter across the battery terminals to check the charge. A fully charged battery should read 12.7 volts or higher.

17. Further information on the battery and jump-starting can be found in Chapter 3 and in the back of this manual.

12.4a The main bolt on the main bolt's terminal must extend between the tracks (B) on the terminal mount (B) above, main bolt.

12.5 Ground check, adjustment and replacement (every 6000 miles or 6 months)

Refer to illustrations 12.5, 12.6a, 12.6b, 12.6c, 12.6d, 12.6e

1. A negative lead is located at the foot of the engine and plays an important role in the overall operation of the engine and its components. Due to its function and material make-up, the lead is subject to wear and should be periodically inspected. The negative lead allows the alternator, power steering pump, water pump and air conditioning compressor. Note: All models have one lead. Information here can mean lead and a second, over-lead just for the air conditioning compressor (if equipped).

2. With the engine off, open the hood and use your fingers (and a flashlight, if necessary) to move along the lead checking for cracks and separation of the two plates. Also check for fraying and glazing, which prove the lead is doing its job properly (see illustration). Note: When the lead should be inspected, check things you will have to test the lead to check the unit.

3. Check the underside of the lead. They should be at the same depth, with none of the surface exposed.

4. The tension of the lead is maintained by a spring-loaded bracket assembly and isn't adjustable. The lead should be replaced when the mark on the movable part of the bracket moves out of the acceptable range or lies on the stationary part of the bracket (see illustration).

5. To replace the lead, slide the bracket to release the lead (see illustration). Note: Before removing the lead, make a mark of how it is held around the pulley. If you don't have a pulley, you can replace it.

6. Remove the lead from the terminal and routing components are ready to be replaced.

12.6a The tension for the air conditioning compressor (indicated) is further to the left. The mark (B) on the movable part of the bracket must be within the acceptable range marks (B).

12.6b Place A located on the terminal lead (A) and have the terminal structure (B) for lead removal.

12.6c On V6 models with an air conditioning, the main lead terminal is fastened to the battery. Use a 1/4 inch drive nut in the terminal's support hole (B) to make it (B) for lead removal.

7. Slide the new lead over the various cables, again moving the terminal to allow the lead to be installed. Then remove the lead tension.

Tensioner replacement

Refer to illustrations 12.6a and 12.6b

8. To replace a tensioner that has lost its spring tension, replace the tensioner with a new one. The tensioner is located on the movable part of the bracket (see illustration).

9. Installation is the reverse of the removal process.

12.6 Underhood hose check and replacement (every 6000 miles or 6 months)

General

Caution: Replacement of an air conditioning hose that is left in a state where it is not used or an air conditioning hose that has the equipment to depressure the system safely and remove the refrigerant. Note: Remove an air conditioning component or hose and the system has been depressured.

1. High temperatures in the engine compartment can cause the deterioration of the rubber and plastic hoses used for engine, accessory and emission systems. Inspect hoses regularly. Hoses should be made for cracks, loose clamps, exposed hardening and leaks. Information specific to the cooling system hoses can be found in Section 14.

2. Some fuel and oil hoses are secured to one thing with clamps. When clamps are used, check to be sure they haven't loosened, allowing the hose to leak. If clamps aren't used, make sure the hose has not separated under tension when it slips out of the fitting, allowing it to leak.

Vacuum hoses

3. It's quite common for vacuum hoses, especially those in the emission system, to be disconnected or identified by vacuum hoses marked with them. Vacuum systems require hoses with different cut-thickness, collapse resistance and temperature resistance. When replacing hoses, be sure the new ones are made of the same material.

4. Often the only effective way to check a hose is to remove it completely from the vehicle. If more than one hose is removed, be sure to label the hoses and things to avoid system confusion.

5. When checking vacuum hoses, be sure to include any plastic fittings in the check. Inspect the fittings for cracks and the hose where it fits over the fitting for distortion, which could cause leakage.

6. A good grade of vacuum hose (1/4 inch inside diameter) can be used as a substitute to replace vacuum hoses that are out of the hose in your car and provide enough vacuum hoses and things, leaving for the fitting most components of a vacuum hose. Warning: When working with the vacuum hose, be sure to use a vacuum hose that is not used in the emission system.
