Interpellations, Questions and Replies of the National Assembly South Africa. Parliament (1994-). National Assembly,1997 South Africa's Magnifying Glass Pieter Kok,1998 South Africa's transformation to democracy has highlighted the need for reliable socio economic information and analysis to inform the process of meeting our numerous and complex development challenges Reflections on School Integration Mokubung O. Nkomo,Carolyn McKinney,Linda Chisholm,2004 School integration means among other things that the divisions created by apartheid need to be addressed systematically and systemically Integration is not merely about changing the racial demographics of learner and educator bodies It means schools changing to meet the needs of all children fostering meaningful interaction among learners in the classroom on the playground and in extra mural activities as well as instilling a human rights culture It means constructing curricula texts and pedagogies that are informed by a democratic ethos and it requires teachers school managers and communities that are equipped to promote a democratic school environment In short it is about inclusivity and social cohesion And the issue of integration is as pertinent internationally as it is in South Africa questions of race racism citizenship and diversity are central to school systems throughout the world This book contains the proceedings of a colloquium held in October 2003 attended by leading South African and international researchers to take stock of the status quo in school integration and identify new directions research should be taking to support the process of change Making Education Inclusive Sharon Moonsamy,Elizabeth Walton,2015-09-18 Exclusionary pressures and practices are pervasive in education despite the clamour for more inclusive education Even as classrooms worldwide become more diverse education is unlikely to become inclusive without deliberate efforts to dismantle exclusion and enable inclusion This book is a compilation of contributions to the conversation about what these efforts might entail The conversation has its origins in the Making Education Inclusive Conference held in 2013 which brought together academics and practitioners from Southern Africa and other countries Given the expectation that teachers should play a key role in promoting inclusion it is not surprising to find significant interest in teacher education from many of the contributing authors Their concerns range from explicit teacher development for pedagogical responsiveness to learner diversity to overcoming the epistemological marginalisation that learners experience where teachers are not fully confident of their subject content and how to teach it Access to education is clearly not enough and other contributors to this book concern themselves with ways in which structures and systems could be reconstituted to enable meaningful inclusion This might mean looking at how teachers might use tiered systems of behaviour support and various metacognitive strategies how physical access can be promoted on a university campus and understanding how parents think about disability Each chapter represents a different perspective on what it might mean to resist educational exclusion in its many forms and each offers possible ways to make education more inclusive Pan South African Language Board South Africa. Parliament. Senate. Subcommittee on Languages,1995 Linguistics and
