Constitutive Models for Rubber VII Stephen Jerrams, Niall Murphy, 2011-09-09

All aspects of our lives industry health travel and leisure are utterly reliant on rubber materials yet typically this notion rarely occurs to us Increasingly greater demands are made on elastomeric compounds and we seek elevated performance in terms of improved physical and chemical properties In particular we have come to expect rubber components tyres vibration isolators seals etc to exhibit exceptional wear and fatigue resistance often at elevated temperatures Unsurprisingly then the emphasis in characterising isochoric materials has shifted significantly away from understanding and modelling hyperelastic material behaviour to a position where we can confidently design and manufacture rubber components having the functionality and resilience to meet the dynamic loading and harsh environmental conditions that are prevalent today In consequence state of the art technology in terms of dynamic response and fatigue resistance are strongly represented here along with numerous insights into advanced elastomers used in novel applications This development is not at the expense of research devoted to current test procedures and the constitutive equations and algorithms that underpin finite element methods As a result Constitutive Models for Rubber VII is not only essential reading for undergraduates postgraduates academics and researchers working in the discipline but also for all those designers and engineers involved in the improvement of machines and devices by introducing new and novel elastomers possessing elevated properties
