

CEP's early development defined American education's relationship to technology. CEP is a representative example of the challenges American face with technology. American education's relationship to technology is a complex one. It is a relationship that is constantly evolving. It is a relationship that is shaped by a variety of factors, including the needs of the students, the needs of the teachers, and the needs of the society. CEP's early development was a response to the challenges of the time. It was a response to the need for a more effective way of teaching and learning. It was a response to the need for a more equitable way of education. CEP's early development was a response to the challenges of the time.
