

I-Search Paper Requirements and Components

The I-Search Paper will demonstrate your ability to access sources and interpret meaning, organize your thoughts, analyze new knowledge and findings, form personal judgments and conclusions, write with skill and communicate effectively what you have learned. Like traditional research papers, you must use proper citations, and for this you need to follow the MLA style: <http://click.ck12.com/essay/101> is a good resource for this. Be sure to cite sources, use quotation marks around anything you quote from another source, give credit for all ideas that are not your own, and include a correctly formatted Works Cited Page (on back side of assignment page). Unlike traditional research, you will actually use the word "I."

Components of the I-Search Paper:

There are five distinct components to the I-Search paper. This section will take you through the five parts. If you read through this and start writing as it guides you, the process will be a much. It even tells you how long each section should be in order to meet the length requirement. Note all the numbers. They will also come in a flash.

Part A: My Question—What I Already Know, and What I Want to Know

In this section, you will describe what you already know about the topic, what you were interested in it, and what questions you began with. Some questions to guide your work in this section include the following:

- Why have I chosen this topic?
- What product will I create, and how does it relate to this research topic?
- What do I already know about this topic?
- What do I wonder about? What questions do I have? On what particular questions do I want to focus?
- What do I want to "discover" in order to answer my major questions?

In this section, you will probably not cite any research, as it really is just the introduction to your actual work. However, you might refer to particular sources that "inspired" you in terms of interest or ideas which you have gained, what knowledge you already have. This section should be at least 2-3 paragraphs long and provide the reader with a clear sense of why you're researching your topic, how it relates to creating your product, what you already know, and what you hope to find out.
