Value and Unequal Exchange in International Trade Andrea Ricci, 2021-05-19 Contrary to the claims made by neoliberal governments and mainstream academics this book argues that the huge increase in trade in recent decades has not made the world a fairer place instead the age of globalization has become a time of mass migration caused by increasing global inequality The theory of unequal exchange challenges the free trade doctrine claiming that transfers of value from poorer to richer countries are hidden behind apparently equivalent market transactions Following a critical review of the existing approaches the book proposes a general theory of unequal exchange in the light of an innovative reconstruction of Marx's international law of value in which money and exchange rates play a crucial role in decoupling value captured from value produced by different countries even in perfectly competitive world markets On this theoretical basis the book provides an empirical analysis of the international transfers of value in both traditional trade and Global Value Chains The resulting world

mapping of unequal exchange shows the geographical hierarchy of capital global exploitation by revealing a world divided into two quite separate camps of donor and receiving countries the former being the poorer countries and the latter the richer countries This book is addressed to scholars and students of economics and social sciences as well as activists of the North and the South interested in a better understanding of the asymmetric power relations implied in global trade It makes a significant contribution to the literature on political economy trade Marxism international relations and economic geography

Ibáñez, Nikolaos Georgantzis, 2017-08-22 Psychologists studying cognitive processes and personality have increasingly benefited from the wealth of theory methodology and decision making paradigms used in economics and game theory Similarly for the economists personality traits and basic cognitive processes offer a set of coherent explanatory constructs in economic behavior Given the debate on preference invariance and behavioral consistency across contexts and domains the papers in this topic shed light on the existence and effect of stable sets of idiosyncratic features on economic decision making While the effects of personality and cognition on economic decisions remain under explored the papers contributed in this topic offer more than a stimulus for further research The general message could be that personality and cognitive processes offer the stable idiosyncratic ground on which individual decisions are made      Methodological Issues in Consciousness Research, volume II Axel Cleeremans, 2025-04-16 This Research Topic is the second volume of the Research Topic Methodological Issues in Consciousness Research Please see the first volume here The simplest and perhaps the first notion of consciousness in the West as a sentience or awareness of internal or external existence was introduced in the Seventeenth century by the English physician Robert Fludd though similar and even more refined notions of consciousness were developed centuries before in Indian philosophy and contemplative wisdom traditions Because it permeates human existence in so many different ways the study of consciousness is a profoundly interdisciplinary endeavour and engages disciplines such as philosophy including Eastern philosophy cognitive neuroscience anthropology psychiatry and psychopathology and even physics The study of consciousness may involve domains as diverse as perceptual awareness cognition and metacognition reasoning executive control theory of mind self sleep and dreaming emotional competence and empathy It concerns both healthy e g aging meditation spiritual experiences and pathological conditions e g epilepsy neglect and locked in syndromes minimally conscious states anesthesia and involves considerations operating at different time scales e g evolution development expertise Today however and despite almost thirty years of concerted interdisciplinary efforts the nature and mechanisms of consciousness remain as elusive as ever Theoretically different conceptual frameworks aimed at characterizing both its functional and phenomenal aspects take sometimes radically different assumptions as their starting point but often fail to make sufficiently precise differential predictions to be falsifiable While most recent views generally consider methods investigating human higher order reflective or access consciousness the theoretical and experimental foundations of primary proto consciousness often remain vague and ignore evolutionary considerations Influential distinctions such as the distinction between phenomenal and access consciousness between pre reflective minimal and the reflective narrative self between graded and all or none processing or even between conscious and unconscious processing all remain unsettled or controversial The field is also rife with methodological challenges and controversies some of which remain largely unsolved Questions such as how to best measure awareness or to how establish its absence issues such as what kind of neuroscientific data would convincingly make it possible to isolate the neural correlates of consciousness or what types of confounds contaminate extant findings challenges such as how to imagine crucial experiments that are sufficiently sensitive to falsify some theoretical proposals all need to be addressed in open interdisciplinary dialogue This Frontiers Research Topic is aimed at stimulating discussion about current methodological issues and trends in consciousness research We welcome theoretical and empirical contributions as well as empirical articles from both experts and young scientists who work in the field of consciousness research Submissions of related hypotheses original research articles case reports perspectives reviews opinions and commentaries are welcome We very much hope that this Frontiers Research Topic will contribute to enhancing our characterization and understanding of the methodological and conceptual challenges associated with the study of human consciousness The Atlas of Environmental Migration Dina Ionesco, Daria

Mokhnacheva, François Gemenne, 2016-11-25 As climate change and extreme weather events increasingly threaten traditional landscapes and livelihoods of entire communities the need to study its impact on human migration and population displacement has never been greater The Atlas of Environmental Migration is the first illustrated publication mapping this complex phenomenon It clarifies terminology and concepts draws a typology of migration related to environment and climate change describes the multiple factors at play explains the challenges and highlights the opportunities related to this phenomenon Through elaborate maps diagrams illustrations case studies from all over the world based on the most updated international research findings the Atlas guides the reader from the roots of environmental migration through to governance In addition to the primary audience of students and scholars of environment studies climate change geography and migration it will also be of interest to researchers and students in politics economics and international relations departments
