- What, according to Source J, were the challenges faced by the Nationalist [Guomindang] government of China as a result of the outbreak of war with Japan in 1937? [3]
 - Jiang Jieshi lost the opportunity to centralise power and improve the economy.
 - The Nationalists were displaced from their traditional power base.
 - The Nationalists were unable to crush the Communists.
 - The resulting political instability bred fear and discontent.
 - What does Source L suggest about relations between the Chinese Communist Party and the Nationalist Party [Guomindang] in 1937? [2]
 - Both parties were prepared to cooperate with each other.
 - The alliance was in response to Japanese aggression.
 - An alliance between the two parties would effectively “close the door” on Japanese invasion.
- With reference to its origin, purpose and content, analyse the value and limitations of Source K for an historian studying political instability in China between 1931 and 1941. [4]

Value:

 - Extract from a speech by the leader of the Chinese Nationalist [Guomindang] government in 1934, contemporary to the events under study.
 - As head of the Nationalist government, Jiang Jieshi had access to government intelligence and information.
 - Jiang Jieshi is speaking to officers of his army. The speech shows how political instability in China was a great concern for the Nationalist government and the extent to which Jiang Jieshi considered it an obstacle in the fight against Japan.

Limitations:

 - The fact that the speech was made in 1934, but was not released until 1937 suggests the Nationalist government had concerns about the information being made public at the time. It suggests some level of censorship or political manipulation of the speech.
 - As a speech made to officers, Jiang Jieshi may be exaggerating his worries to gain their support in the defence of the Nationalist government.
 - The speech, based on events up to 1934, does not provide a comprehensive account of the political situation in China throughout the entire period.
- Compare and contrast what Sources I and J reveal about political instability in China up to 1941. [6]

Comments:

 - Both sources identify 1937 as a turning point that ended the Nationalists’ chances to centralise power.
