Global Environmental Change Committee on Global Change Research, Policy Division, Policy and Global Affairs, National Research Council, 1999-09-28 How can we understand and rise to the environmental challenges of global change One clear answer is to understand the science of global change not solely in terms of the processes that control changes in climate and the composition of the atmosphere but in how ecosystems and human society interact with these changes In the last two decades of the twentieth century a number of such research efforts supported by computer and satellite technology have been launched Yet many opportunities for integration remain unexploited and many fundamental questions remain about the earth's capacity to support a growing human population This volume encourages a renewed commitment to understanding global change and sets a direction for research in the decade ahead Through case studies the book explores what can be learned from the lessons of the past 20 years and what are the outstanding scientific questions Highlights include Research imperatives and strategies for investigators in the areas of atmospheric chemistry climate ecosystem studies and human dimensions of global change The context of climate change including lessons to be gleaned from paleoclimatology Human responses to and forcing of projected global change This book offers a comprehensive overview of global change research to date and provides a framework for answering urgent questions Global Environmental Changes in South Asia A.P.

Mitra, C. Sharma, 2012-03-05 The Fourth Assessment Report of IPCC having clinched in 2007 the evidence of global warming on account of anthropogenic activities backed with scientific data gathered and analyzed globally has made it mandatory world over to focus efforts on delineation of the anticipated adverse impacts of global warming on regional temperature and moisture regimes and the linked hydrologic climatic and biospheric processes First and foremost is the requirement to understand vulnerability to food and livelihood security in various ecosystems on mainland mid range and high mountains as well as coastal areas including CEZs The projected global temperature rise of the order of about two degrees or more and further rise at a decadal rate of around 0.2 °C is sufficient to make grievous changes in sea surface level and submerge many low lying coastal areas around the world thereby possibly causing unprecedented losses to human habitat and livelihood in the coming years A rise in climate variability is also becoming increasingly evident with potential direct impact on agricultural performance on water accessibility and on weather extremes Developing countries due to their poor infrastructure limited resources and large impoverished population are likely to face more intense and widespread adverse impact of climate change than the developed world and also have limited adaptation capacity

Geomorphology and Global Environmental Change Olav Slaymaker, Tom Spencer, Christine Embleton-Hamann, 2009-07-02 A statement from the world's leading geomorphologists on the state of and potential changes to the environment Fiscal Year 2001 Climate Change Budget Authorization Request United States. Congress. House. Committee on Science. Subcommittee on Energy and Environment, 2001 Global Environmental Change and Land Use Han Haarman, A. Verhagen, C.A. Rovers, 2013-03-14 The interaction between environmental change and human activities is complex requiring the concepts and tools of a number of disciplines for its effective analysis Land use and land cover change has only recently become a topic susceptible to scientific research as these concepts and tools have been developed and made available Rooted in a broad community concerned with global change systematic research has begun into land use systems at different scales and interactions and their links with global cycles of water nitrogen and carbon are being explored Partly based on research initiated by the Dutch National Research Programme on Global Air Pollution and Climate Change NRP this book touches upon various land use and land cover issues in relation to global environmental change In addition to the biogeochemical cycles land as a carrier for functions of economic activities food and fibre production and energy production via biomass are discussed Crucial in studying land use is human behaviour and man environment interaction at different scales Land use and land cover change is an important contributor of greenhouse gases as these activities directly interfere with the carbon nitrogen and water cycles These cycles are connected through numerous feedback loops The interface of land use and climate is essentially determined by the interaction of man and the environment Man uses land primarily to produce food a relatively small area is needed for urban development Remote Sensing and Global Environmental Change Sam J. Purkis, Victor V. Klemas, 2011-03-07 Remote Sensing plays a key role in monitoring the various manifestations of global climate change It is used routinely in the assessment and mapping of biodiversity over large areas in the monitoring of changes to the physical environment in assessing threats to various components of natural systems and in the identification of priority areas for conservation This book presents the fundamentals of remote sensing technology but rather than containing lengthy explanations of sensor specifications and operation it concentrates instead on the application of the technology to key environmental systems Each system forms the basis of a separate chapter and each is illustrated by real world case studies and examples Readership The book is intended for advanced undergraduate and graduate students in earth science environmental science or physical geography taking a course in environmental remote sensing It will also be an invaluable reference for environmental scientists and managers who require an overview of the use of remote sensing in monitoring and mapping environmental change at regional and global scales Additional resources for this book can be found at http://www.wiley.com/go/purkis_remote

Policy Making in an Era of Global Environmental Change R.E. Munn, J.W.M. la Rivière, N. van Lookeren Campagne, 2012-12-06 Major international interdisciplinary research programmes are now underway to increase our understanding of how the Earth System operates and how it is changing through the effects of human activities Although understanding and predictive capacity are still limited scientists already agree that significant global changes must be expected in the next 50 years that will affect the capacity of the Earth to sustain life Governments business and industry have therefore come to recognize that scientific knowledge about the changing global environment as yet incomplete but rapidly evolving is becoming indispensable for wise long term policy making the goal being to design preventive adaptive and remedial measures Thus global change science and policy making are engaged in a process of forming a new partnership that is taking shape as further insights evolve Effective continuous interactions between the partners requires mutual understanding decision makers need to understand the unique potential but also the limitations of the results of scientific research in progress while scientists must take into account the priorities and constraints of policy makers in designing and implementing policies that will promote long term sustainability of life on this planet This book contributes in a unique manner to this mutual understanding It gives an overview of the ongoing relevant research focusing on the two major international programmes the International Geosphere Biosphere Programme and the World Climate Research Programme These are described in terms understandable to the interested lay reader The results of the latest review of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change IPCC are included This is followed by an analysis of the response process that is in progress with respect to governments singly and multilaterally by business and industry and by public interest groups This process is leading to interactive structures assessment procedures and legislation nationally and internationally Business and industry are changing from mere watchfulness to recognition of new opportunities for products and processes Six interviews with prominent figures from business and government circles in the Netherlands provide a vivid illustration of the questions at issue The appendices provide overviews of methods for incorporating the results of global change science into policy making and development of long lasting projects Adaptation to climate change serves as an example Thus for the first time one book describes both ongoing research work in global change and the response processes that the research results are evoking It is of interest to all stake holders in the scientific community as well as to decision makers in industry business and government

Climate Change 2001: The Scientific Basis J. T. Houghton, Y. Ding, D. J.

Griggs, M. Noguer, P. J. van der Linden, X. Dai, K. Maskell, C. A. Johnson, 2001-07-12 Climate Change 2001 The Scientific Basis is the most comprehensive and up to date scientific assessment of past present and future climate change The report Analyses an enormous body of observations of all parts of the climate system Catalogues increasing concentrations of atmospheric greenhouse gases Assesses our understanding of the processes and feedbacks which govern the climate system Projects scenarios of future climate change using a wide range of models of future emissions of greenhouse gases and aerosols Makes a detailed study of whether a human influence on climate can be identified Suggests gaps in information and understanding that remain in our knowledge of climate change and how these might be addressed This latest IPCC assessment will again form the standard scientific reference for all concerned with climate change and its consequences including students and researchers in all aspects of environmental and atmospheric science and policymakers in governments and industry worldwide
