Finding Hope in Nature Dr. Neeraja Havaligi, 2021-05-15 Be inspired by nature seen through mindful poetry and photographs of nature s beauty that provide a breathtaking visual background for each of the poems This collection of poems brings positivity and hope in times of uncertainty influenced by the pandemic Nature it is all around us and yet we are not intentionally conscious of or aware that we are part of and inseparable from nature Simply put we are because nature is Nature abounds everywhere on windowsills garden beds bird baths and feeders on trails on beaches it is present a hopeful peek of a germinating seed on a side of a pavement Think when was the last time you pondered or stopped in wonder at the constant reminder of nature around you When did you last watch an unfurling fern the buds waiting to burst signal growth and spring Think of the rising sun its light playing on water and setting the energy cycle through plants the arrival of the moon and stars that remind us we need to rest recuperate and be energized for tomorrow The Covid 19 pandemic unshackled us from life as we had known the business as usual In a rush to secure our life from the virus we found ourselves suddenly being remote from everything that sustained us human companionship community and to some connection to the outside to nature As we grappled to make sense of the contactless Covid 19 lifestyle we saw a tumultuous reflection on our inner pandemic in George Floyd s cry for breath and smoke filled skies of the worst fire season in the United States pacific northwest In the days masked with smoke with questions about contactless Covid 19 life I wondered how my children and students saw meaning a purpose to their lives What might the thoughts of these young people getting their diplomas their degrees and setting out to the world What might they feel as their purpose in life I listened to people processing their own evolving purpose as a parent a teacher an offspring a sibling and as community members as I processed mine I sensed us grappling with the collective pain inflicted by the virus on health care economies and dis connected education the challenge it threw on social threads that connect us and an awareness of the power and vulnerability of nature I turned more to nature to find relief from grief rejuvenate hope and find meaning a purpose revealed in the fragility of life particularly in the times we are in Observing nature tells me nature is the ultimate expression of hope Being with nature as winter arrived after a fiery fall and the seeds emerged after winter watching the dance has helped me realize that being present in the present is the foundation to find the purpose of our life
